ceſs, whoſe large and comprehenſive Knowledge of Perſons and Things, of Sciences and Languages: whoſe Delicacy of Wit, Strength of Judgment and Reaſon, Juſtneſs of Thought, and Politeneſs of Expreſſion: whoſe Evenneſs of Mind, Sweetneſs of Temper, Condeſcending Affability, and Eaſineſs of Acceſs; and, to crown the Reſt, whoſe unaffected Piety and Univerſal Charity have long attracted the Praiſe and Admiration of Europe.

Theſe, Madam, are a few of thoſe Amiable and Princely Qualities, which, as they are eminently conſpicuous in Your Royal Highneſs; ſo, by Your pious Care and auſpicious Influence, they have diffus'd themſelves thro' every Branch of the moſt Serene Houſe of Hanover; and yield a reaſonable Proſpect,