

P R E F A C E.

ing, will be thought of some Consequence to the Publick; and tho' I am far from pretending to have set the Principles I defend in all the Lustre they are capable of, I doubt not, that I have sufficiently shewn the Weakness of the Objections against them, and that all impartial Readers will easily perceive, that whatever is defective in this Defence, can only be imputed to want of Judgment in the Undertaker, equal to the Truth and Justice of the Cause.

E R R A T A.

Page 21. l. 32. dele the. p. 23. l. 12. r. the Veracity of their. p. 74. l. 7. r. to Mr.

A

